Dear Friends and Partners:

We have exciting news to share!

Clinglobal/Clinvet group and Animal Clinical Investigation have entered into a strategic partnership to provide more comprehensive research and product development services.

This strategic partnership leverages the seasoned talent, regulatory expertise, world-class test facilities, extensive clinical investigational network, data management and statistical services, robust quality systems and central contracting capabilities of both highly regarded businesses.

- This partnership brings together well-established and complementary pre-clinical and clinical CROs that have served the animal health industry for more than two decades. Together, we provide unparalleled competencies and continuity for full product development efforts and other R&D needs.
- Our partnership combines core services providing customized animal health and translational product development R&D solutions, from individual pre-clinical and clinical study requests to start-to-finish new product development support.
- Key benefits to our current and future clients include:
 - An expanded group of scientific and regulatory Subject Matter Experts;
 - Coordination of investigational and regulatory strategies and submissions, including regulatory representation and client advocacy for product development plans and submissions;
 - Integrating pre-clinical and clinical studies, incorporating scientific, strategic, and regulatory guidance into project planning leading to efficient study implementation that includes highly effective data management, biostatistics, and reporting.
- Our partnership provides project/portfolio management capabilities for new start-ups and biotech and expanded capacity and capability for large Animal Health companies with diverse and growing commercial portfolios.
- Our partnership also facilitates opportunities for human health companies to explore the potential and manage the risk related to new chemical and biological entities through pre-clinical and clinical animal disease models.

CONFIDENTIAL

- With deep knowledge in the science and regulation of animal health pharmaceuticals, parasiticides, and biologicals, our partnership enhances both companies' ability to meet Sponsor needs, including government and non-government funding agencies focused on alleviating the global impact of animal and human disease.

We strongly believe that a strategic partnership between Clinglobal and ACI offers you an R&D platform to help you meet your product development goals. With aligned business values, Clinglobal and ACI are committed to delivering on our promise.

We look forward to sharing our combined vision with you at upcoming meetings and how we can best support your needs.

Sincerely,

Wessel Fourie
